As part of the process of implementing the Sustainable Development Goals, the Government has confirmed its long-term target in principle of achieving an ODA percentage of 0.7%. In the coming years, expenditure is to be increased so that an ODA percentage of 0.5% is reached.

Recommendation 108.47.

Noted.

Liechtenstein believes that the existing legal framework is sufficient to promote compliance with international standards in these areas. This legal framework is based, inter alia, on the conclusion of free trade agreements which contain strong commitments to maintaining international standards with regard to trade and investment in labour and the environment.

Recommendation 108.48.

Accepted.

All legal persons in Liechtenstein, including private foundations, are subject to the criminal liability of companies with regard to corruption offences.

See 108.21.

Recommendation 108.49.

Accepted.

Together with the United Nations University, Liechtenstein has launched an international initiative aimed at implementing calls of the UN Security Council to States and the financial sector to combat modern slavery and human trafficking. This is to be achieved by ensuring effective corporate due diligence in global value chains.

Recommendation 108.50.

Noted.

Liechtenstein implements sanctions in accordance with international law and on the basis of Security Council resolutions and EU decisions.

Recommendation 108.51.

Recommendation 108.54.

Accepted.

See 108.51.

Recommendation 108.55.

Noted.

Usually, a maximum of one young person is imprisoned in the National Prison. In this case, a special regime adapted to the individual case is organised to alleviate the conditions of solitary confinement as far as possible.

Recommendation 108.56.

Accepted.

So far there have been no cases of human trafficking, modern slavery, or child labour in Liechtenstein. The Round Table on Human Trafficking monitors the situation on an ongoing basis and initiates measures if necessary.

Recommendation 108.57.

Accepted, and considered already implemented.

According to § 147 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, every suspect has the right to communicate with a defence counsel before questioning and to consult that defence counsel for the examination. This also applies to young people who, under § 21a of the Juvenile Courts Act, additionally have the right to appoint a person of confidence for the examination.

Recommendation 108.58.

Accepted.

Recommendation 108.59.

Accepted.

In Liechtenstein, numerous services of public authorities are already available electronically. This includes completing and submitting forms, viewing official announcements in the Official Journal, applying for stipends, VAT accounting, and a mailbox for official documents. Since 2012, Liechtenstein has had an E-Government Act that was revised in 2016. Liechtenstein is also one of the signatories of the Tallinn Declaration on eGovernment with the basic commitment to further develop e-government.

Recommendation 108.60.

Accepted, and considered already implemented.

A custody registry has been introduced. According to § 128a of the Code of Criminal Procedure (StPO), every detained person must be informed during the arrest or immediately afterwards of the right to notify a defence counsel and of the right not to testify. Persons taken into police custody are always given the opportunity to contact a lawyer. According to § 147 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, every suspect has the right to communicate with a defence counsel before questioning and to consult that defence counsel for the examination. This also applies to police interrogations. Monitoring under § 30(3) of the Code of Criminal Procedure is only possible with a reasoned decision by the judge. In practice, the National Police do not know of any case in recent years in which a conversation between the suspect and the defence counsel has been monitored.

Recommendation 108.61.

Accepted, and considered already implemented.

Only in exceptional circumstances and in accordance with the principle of proportionality may the right to privacy be infringed and personal data processed. In Liechtenstein, electronic communication may be monitored only in the context of criminal proceedings.

Liechtenstein has no intelligence service.

Recommendation 108.63.

Noted.

Recommendation 108.64.

Accepted.

Recommendation 108.65.

Accepted.

The Government implements measures on an ongoing basis to increase the political participation of women, including the politics course for women that has been held for many years. A campaign was launched for the 2019 municipal elections to make female politicians visible. However, the introduction of quotas or systems to achieve gender parity is not planned. In general, gender equality is one of Liechtenstein's priorities in implementing the Sustainable Development Goals of the 2030 Agenda.

Recommendation 108.66.

Noted.

See 108.65.

Noted.

Ensuring a balanced representation of both genders in political bodies would ultimately require the introduction of a quota.

Recommendation 108.79.

Accepted.

At 87.2%, the school attendance of 15- to 19-year-olds after completing compulsory schooling is at a gratifyingly high level and thus also above the OECD average. The aim is to provide all young people with a secondary level diploma. A wide range of educational opportunities is offered to meet the skills and needs of young people – both in general and through vocational training. Both paths guarantee admission to tertiary education.

Recommendation 108.80.

Accepted, and considered already implemented.

In the new Liechtenstein curriculum LiLe, the topics of gender and social justice as well as the handling of diversity and discrimination play an important role. In general, schools promote skills in dealing with the opposite sex and other cultures as well as ethnic and religious tolerance.

Recommendation 108.81.

Noted.

Compulsory schooling is already enshrined in the Constitution (Article 16(2)). Public schools are open to all and attendance is in principle free of charge (Article 7 of the Education Act). There is also a corresponding reference in the Children and Youth Act (Article 1(1)(g) and Article 3).
